

Tsui Lam Parent Notice (2020-11-17)

Dear Parents:

Due to the outbreak of Upper respiratory tract infections in our school, as advised by the Department of Health, our school has already suspended classes of Junior Primary and Secondary section , while the Senior Primary students can continue to attend face-to-face classes. The school is in close contact with the Department of Health and hopes to resume classes as soon as possible under appropriate conditions. During the suspension period, the school will provide ZOOM online lessons, parents are advised to pay attention to the relevant information.

In accordance with the instruction of the Department of Health, the school will strengthen the cleaning and disinfection work at school. We would like to urge parents to follow the health guidelines of the Department of Health and pay attention to the health condition of their children. If your child shows any symptoms of Upper respiratory tract infection, please do not attend school and seek medical treatment immediately. Parents are required to check their child's temperature every day before school. According to the guidelines of the Education Bureau and the Department of Health, students who are unwell should stay home for at least 2 days until fever subsides and should not have any respiratory symptoms. If the school finds that the student has fever and does not feel well, the school will contact the parents to pick up the student and advise them to seek medical attention as soon as possible. If you have any questions, please call the school nurse.
